Nikki is great! <https://userresearchacademy.com/>

I also utilized a lot of templates online (discussion guides, consent forms, etc.)

18:39:53 From Chris Tang to Everyone:
In looking at resumes on BestFolios.com, they all have columns in them. I've heard that columns have a tougher time getting through ATS, or being ranked as highly for key words. Thoughts? Advice? I find columns are more visually-friendly and easier to digest. My last resume has columns.

18:41:00 From Heather van H to Everyone:
That's awesome, Zachary!

18:41:01 From Lauren Singer - UXRS to Everyone:

Just for fun, I wrote a 'case study' about my process of designing a face mask. i.e. you can write a case study about almost anything using a UX framework.

I'm trying to retool this project into a more UX RS focused case study and the separate google doc I've created is now so long, I'm losing my marbles. If anyone would like to take a look and comment, I'd love to hear from a UX researcher on what I should be improving and prioritizing first
